

In Jesus' day, some people thought the Savior would be for just a certain select group of people, an inner circle of special chosen ones.

But then Jesus — the Savior and the Son of God — came to earth and made it clear that his love, forgiveness, grace, mercy, and call to repent and believe the Good News was for the whole world.

He noticed people that others overlooked, shamed, rejected, and cast aside.

He spent time with them.

He welcomed them.

He healed them.

He heard them.

He restored them.

He challenged them.

He invited them to new life.

He said, "Follow me — but be sure to first count the cost of being my disciple."

This is his story, as written by Luke.
